

Washington Report

by GEORGE ANDREWS
Member of Congress
Third District of Ala.

If the pollution of our lakes and streams continues, Alabama may never again feel safe in eating the fish that come from them.

It's a big problem, and the relatively new and growing agricultural industry of fish farming may provide at least a partial solution.

The Fish Farming Assistance Act of 1971, which I have just sponsored in Congress, can bring new economic life to farming communities all over the country, just as it has in certain areas of the South, including Southeast Alabama.

Added from providing a source of pollution-free fish, fish farming legislation can bring back the family farm, which seems to be vanishing in direct proportion to the over-crowding of our large cities.

In 1969, the wholesale crop of farm-raised fish in this country was over $33 million, a small portion of the total value of fish consumed. An amazing 60 percent of all fish products consumed in the United States are imported. Most of the remaining 30 percent are salt-water varieties, with very few pond raised fish to be had.

The Bureau of Sports Fisheries estimates that in fish farming, we are probably dealing with a $5 million dollar retail business.

Although fish farming is a small enterprise as compared to what it could be made, about 68,000 acres in the United States are under intensive warmwater fish culture, with 39,300 of these devoted to catfish production, in the manner of the Hartford Lake Fisheries in Geneva County.

Fish farming clearly has a promising future. Growing consumption of fish products, which have a high protein content, and the growing population will increase the demand for fish, both as food and for sport fishing.

This farming is not restricted to any one particular type of species of fish. It can be successfully combined with row crop and livestock enterprises, and there is absolutely no worry about crop quarantines or national overproduction. The consumer cannot lose. Instead of worry he now has about the possible presence of mercury in the fish he catches or buys, he will have a source of fresh fish produced under very closely supervised and controlled conditions in a pollution-free environment.

In order to give impetus to this promising new farming industry, the bill that I have sponsored will give the Department of Agriculture, which has long experience in assisting the farming community, to be in charge of the federal program for fresh-water fish culture. This bill would also authorize the Federal Government to make various forms of financial assistance available to persons to enable them to engage in fish farming. Direct loans and mortgage and rent guarantees would be made available to U.S. citizens who are otherwise qualified but simply cannot get the money at reasonable rates.

The government would participate to the extent of 90 percent of the cost of a proposed venture, but limit direct loans to 50 percent of the proposed governmental assistance. The balance of the governmental assistance would come in the form of guarantees.

The great push in Government programs today seems to be geared to help the cities. However, more people are beginning to realize that the best way to help the cities is to develop the rural areas of this nation, so that many people will go "back to the country."

The Fish Farming Assistance Act of 1971 is at least one step in that direction.

The grave problem of American prisoners of war received special attention by the House of Representatives on March 23. At that time, I made the following remarks:

"I speak out today as part of a National week of concern for prisoners of war and missing in action. I hope that participation in this week of special attention will not give anyone at home or abroad the idea that the Congress of the United States is not concerned every day of every week with the plight of our brave men in prison."

that all parties are bound to adhere to their terms. "Nobody outside the Communist World would accept North Vietnam's contention that captured American pilots are criminals, rather than prisoners of war."

"Certainly the International Committee of the Red Cross does not accept the contention. Article 2 of the Geneva Convention says very clearly that it is applicable to all cases of declared war. It is not a matter of the parties to the Convention, even if the state of war is not recognized by one of them."

"Available reports tell us that American prisoners of war are being treated brutally. How many have been executed? How many have been starved to death? How many are critically ill? We cannot answer these questions, because the Government of North Vietnam, so adored by its prisoners. We do not know who they have or how many they have."

"It is estimated that more than 1,500 American servicemen are considered missing in Southeast Asia. About 400 are listed by the Department of Defense as captured, but we cannot be absolutely sure since contrary to the Geneva Accords, the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong have not given us a list of those captured."

"The International Committee of the Red Cross declared as early as 1965 that the Geneva Conventions are fully in force in the Vietnam conflict and that all parties are bound to adhere to their terms."

"We are concerned at all times and shall continue to be concerned until the Government of North Vietnam adheres to its responsibilities as a signer of the provisions of the Geneva Convention in 1957."

"It is incredible to think that the first American pilot was shot down and captured by North Vietnam in 1964. According to the best evidence available, this airman is still a prisoner—over six and a half years later."

gress, regardless of our views on the Vietnam war per se, are very much concerned about American prisoners of war, and under the most deplorable circumstances."

"Resolutions calling on North Vietnam to cease its inhumane treatment of American held captive have received virtual unanimous approval when offered in both Houses of Congress. I am concerned, and I know that all of my colleagues in this body are concerned. We reaffirm our commitment to apply every possible pressure on the enemy to abide by the tenets of the Geneva Convention. Thus far, they have violated practically every provision."

"It is my judgement that if we had moved swiftly for a military victory in this bloody war, we would not be faced with the problem of how to liberate these men. We would have long ago liberated our men."

"In fact, there probably would have been very few of these men. We would have smashed them. We would have liberated them in short order, and all of our men would be home right now."

"However, this Administration has followed the folly of the last one, and we are bogged down in a self-defeating war of attrition which our own President has publicly vowed not to seek a military solution."

"Given this situation, it is therefore imperative that the President exert every possible effort to see that our men are suffering, and that they are in the camps of North Vietnam."

BRAINSTORMS

With Ferrin Cox

The Bryce-Partlow Chapel Fund has fallen short of its goal to build a chapel for the patients at Bryce Hospital. The Alabama Press Association has undertaken a campaign to make this a reality. The theme of the campaign is "To make Easter more meaningful." This week and last The Elba Clipper has printed a drawing of the proposed chapel and a coupon for your convenience in making your donation. It sounds like a good thing to do. . . now.

There has been a lot of excitement lately concerning the conviction and sentencing of 11, William Calley, who featured a girl in a one piece suit had a tag line of "Oldfashioned." That may be so, but somehow that was my favorite.

The Elba Rescue Squad sponsoring a Horse Show on April 24th. They go all out with these things and this time promise the trophies will be bigger and better. These men are A-O-K. They not only devote their time and money but also get out and work for money to pay for expenses and equipment.

Had two of my friends from Andalusia in the office this week. They occasionally read this column and were asking if I had gotten any action of getting someone to release the burned buildings in town back to the owners for clean up. I told them that the buildings had been released but honestly didn't think the credit was mine. State investigator Jerry Grant who is currently working in this area told me getting "bad-mouthed" by newspaper editors was just part of his job and was simply ignored. Grant is a good fellow even though he is not scared of me, and even though he took part in a practical joke that got me out of bed quite late Saturday night.

This week I was asked by a close friend "What should I do about some ugly rumors circulating about me?" Well, I didn't ask what the rumor was because it was immaterial. Probably the best thing to do is ignore untrue rumors and they will go away. Of course there are times when things get out of hand and it becomes necessary to punch a nose or box some ears. Mostly, though, denying rumors spreads them. Once a political candidate I knew started denying he had anything to do with bootlegging. Shucks, until he told me about it I had not heard that story but after asking around a little I was convinced, he, in fact, still bootlegs!

The state legislature is now in session and all indications are that there will be some new taxes needed. This is not our grapes but, . . . George Wallace says AFTER the election "no direct taxes" but repeatedly before the election it was "no taxes with out approval of people." In his Kick-Off Rally of March 14, 1970, in Mobile, Governor Wallace said, "I pledge to you that no new taxes will be advocated or sponsored by our administration and if any are enacted by the Legislature, we will insist that those of state wide application be referred to the people for their approval before they become effective" . . . That was one year ago.

Treatment For Dogwood Borer

With Easter being just around the corner, the flowering dogwood tree becomes more evident in the landscaping arrangements of our residential areas.

The dogwood tree is noted for its colorful flowers that uncannily seem to always bloom during the Easter period. Due to the beauty of its flower, the dogwood tree is a highly valued member of landscape plantings. However, care should be taken while maintaining the area in which dogwood trees exist. If the dogwood trees in your yard are injured or scarred, chances are good that the dogwood borer (Ham-nospecta salicis) has taken up housekeeping there.

Larvae of the dogwood borer bore into the bark and feed on the underlying cambium layer. This cuts off moisture and nutrients traveling from the root system to the crown. Five to twenty five larvae can be found in large trees. The larvae can get so plentiful that they completely girdle the cambium layer and the tree dies.

After the borer gets into the bark, flickers and other birds peck at the holes in the dogwood tree looking for the larvae. This pecking leads to additional bark damage and more infestation.

The adult form of the dogwood borer is a small, clear-winged moth, emerges in April, May and June. Looking for the borer in the dogwood trees on which to lay eggs.

The most effective dogwood borer control method is preventing injury to trees by lawn mowers, blower, rakes and other mechanical devices. The larvae can be removed from the borings mechanically and the wounds treated with a good tree wound dressing. Coffee County peanut farmers will vote on Saturday, April 26, in a referendum to determine whether they will market their 1941 crop under marketing quotas, according to Hugh D. Sexton, county agent.

Approximately 200 teachers of the Coffee County Association gathered at Lake Tholocco Saturday for an all-day recreational meeting and bar-be-cue.

Mr. and Mrs. Moley Boutwell announce the marriage of their daughter, Mary Gwendolyn, to Paul Rowe Brunson, the marriage having taken place in DeFuniak Springs, Florida, February ninth.

April Tenth Last Day For Applications

April 10 has been set as the last day farmers can apply for Federal AIC Risk Crop Insurance Protection on their 1971 cotton crop, and the deadline for peanut protection is April 30.

Dr. W. M. Ringsdorf left Monday for Birmingham, where he will attend the annual convention of the Alabama Dental Association which is meeting in the Magic City this week.

Work is progressing rapidly on an addition to Loresy Brothers' machine shop on Claxton Street just behind the new Gulf Service Station Building.

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Whitman have stood it about as long as they are able. They plan to go to Ft. Sill, Oklahoma in the near future to visit their grandson, Butch Ogas, and their daughter, Mrs. Billy Ogas.

Mrs. Flectwood Garney was elected president of the Elba P.T.A. Tuesday evening at the high school.

Miss Genette Fleming, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Fleming and J. D. Kendrick, son of Mr. and Mrs. Terry Kendrick, were married Sunday afternoon, April 1, at the home of the bride.

As a result of the heavy rain last Thursday morning, Pea River had about a 10 foot rise. It was the first time in many months that backwater flooded the old Smith pasture in West Elba.

The T. M. Stroud home, about two miles east of Elba, on the Enterprise Highway is unique. To make the home conform to the lot, he constructed the building with three floor levels.

Plans for a baseball team in Elba were discussed at a meeting of interested players at the City Hall Tuesday evening. Formation of a six-team league with a play-off was planned.

Department of Agriculture is required by law to stop accepting applications for insurance protection before general planting gets underway.

Although a deadline has been established, interested farmers should not wait until the last minute to check into the program. If unusual risk conditions develop in the area or if planting progresses faster than expected, the Corporation will stop application sign-up without notice to the growers.

With Crop Insurance protection a cotton or peanut grower is guaranteed the return of his growing cost should any natural hazard destroy all or part of his crop.

The District Office for the above mentioned counties is located at The Colony, 1915 Montgomery Hwy., Dothan, Alabama.
